Fuel Saving Order Hits City's Holiday Lighting; Truman Takes Helm in 'Finish Fight' With Lewis

Downtown Area To Be Dimmed

CPA Brownout Will Become Severe If Crisis Mounts

Mansfield's gaily-lighted downtown shopping area today faced transformation into drab, dimly-lighted streets and blacked-out store windows during the holiday season as the government ordered a brownout in Ohio and 20 other states, effective at 6 p. m. Monday.

Municipal officials, merchants and the Ohio Public Service company said they had not been informed officially of the Civilian Production administration order, issued late yesterday, but indicated they would comply with the government's request.

The brownout order, called to conserve electricity in the mounting crisis resulting from the coal strike, also would cancel Mansfield's annual Christmas lights in the downtown area.

Some 3,000 red and green light bulbs were scheduled to be strung up in Central park on Thanksgiving day to usher in the Christmas shopping season.

Show Windows Hit.

In addition, all outdoor and indoor advertising displays using electricity must be doused, lights in show windows and show cases extinguished, all bulbs in theater marquees in excess of a total of 60 watts turned out, and white way street lighting in excess of that necessary for public safety browned out.

V. H. Lodde, secretary of the Retail Merchants' association, said a board meeting was scheduled for Monday night. He said members "undoubtedly" will take action on the government order.

"Mansfield merchants will comply with any fuel-conservation orders issued by the state or national government," he said.

He said he could not make any further statement until the board meets.

Mayor Roy W. Vaughn also said he knew nothing about the CPA order, and until he knew more about it, could not comment.

Awaits Orders.

Joy Herbert, district manager of the OPS, was out of the city today, but a spokesman for the company said the offices here has not received official orders yet.

"We're expecting something from Cleveland by Monday," the spokesman said. "Naturally, the company will obey any orders from the government."

In Columbus, Gov. Frank J. Lausche today ordered Ohio's public utilities companies to make

AGREEMENT ENDS MARITIME TIEUP

SAN FRANCISCO —(INS)— Federal Conciliator Omar F. Hoskins announced today that the membership of the AFL Masters, Mates and Pilots association has accepted peace proposals to end the Pacific coast maritime tieup.

Hoskins said the membership will meet later today to receive official notice of the acceptance and instructions, following which a joint conference of union heads and shipowners has been arranged to formally sign the agreement.

Acceptance by the MMPA eliminated the last remaining controversy between Pacific coast maritime unions and shipowners and opened the way for complete resumption of shipping activity in coast ports.

Doctors Separate Twin From Sister

FLORENCE—(INS)—Italian surgeons reportedly carried out a successful operation today to separate a Siamese twin from her sister who died a few minutes after birth.

The surviving girl baby was said by hospital authorities to be doing well after the 20 minute operation begun almost immediately after the death of her sister. The joined twins were born to Mrs. Evallna Desi. The survivor, named Rosana, was bound to her sister at the abdomen and chest.

Government Hints Pipelines Will Carry Gas

(Compiled from Wire Dispatches)

WASHINGTON — Amid drastic government moves to ease tightening soft coal shortages, President Truman headed back from Florida today to resume personal command of his "finish fight" with John L. Lewis.

Government officials reported the big and little inch pipelines, wartime conveyors of oil, may be put to work carrying natural gas from Texas to the east for emergency fuel.

A reliable official source said that representatives of the army, navy, interior department, federal power commission and war assets administration were studying the pipeline proposal.

Officials were informed by private industry that as much as 100 million cubic feet of gas a day could be pushed through the 1,500-mile cross-country oil pipelines. In terms of heat produced, this would equal about 4,000 tons of coal a day.

President Returns.

Mr. Truman was due back at the White House in mid-afternoon along with his chief labor advisor, reconversion director John R. Steelman, who flew down for conferences during the president's week-long vacation at Key West.

The president was expected to be given a complete report by Interior Secretary J. A. Krug and Attorney General Tom Clark, to whom he issued instructions from his Florida vacation headquarters for a showdown court battle with the UMW.

Mr. Truman was expected to stay in close contact with Krug and Clark. It was believed, however, that he would not take any personal step in the matter until the government's contempt case against Lewis has run its course.

What Mr. Truman will do after the case is decided was described as "another matter."

SEE 25 MILLION IDLE IN MONTH

PITTSBURGH —(INS)— The nation's unemployment rolls were increased today as first cut backs in America's steel and automobile industries came on the third day of the nationwide strike of 400,000 soft coal miners.

Industrialists predicted unemployment may eventually reach the 25,000,000 figure if the coal strike continues for 30 days.

Steel makers already have announced production curtailments, adding that more were to come within the next two weeks. The country's major steel mills have a 15-day average supply of coal on hand.

A steel spokesman said production will be cut to more than 50 per cent of normal late next week if the strike continues.

The trucking industry and river barge workers felt the effects of the miners' strike in the Pittsburgh area. More than 1,200 truckers and seamen have been thrown out of work.

In Detroit, the automobile industry, already hard hit by a shortage of rolled sheet steel, faces nearly a complete stoppage within 10 days. Fabricating plants and other steel dependent firms began reducing production.

Layoffs on railroads throughout the heavy coal carrying areas have furloughed an unestimated number of train crews. Additional revenue will be lost beginning Sunday midnight when ODT order reducing passenger service 25 per cent goes into effect.

BROOKLYN GIRL'S QUEEN

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Homecoming queen at today's Ohio State-Michigan game will be Anne Leslie Weiner, a Brooklyn, N. Y. brunette and a sophomore in the college of commerce. Election of brown-eyed, brown-haired Miss Weiner was announced at a homecoming dance last night.

FRIGID WAVE DUE TO EASE BY TOMORROW

Mercury Drops to Official 18 In City, Lowest of Season In Mansfield.

Old Man Winter stole into Mansfield last night and when city residents got up this morning the mercury stood at 18 degrees, lowest of the season.

Unofficially, temperatures were as low as 15 and 16 degrees.

It was the first real cold of the season, and the weatherman said it probably won't stay long. While the mercury is due to drop far below freezing again tonight, the weather will begin to warm up Sunday.

There's also some light rain in sight for tomorrow, the forecast said.

First Snow Falls.

Last night also saw the initial snow of the season along the southern shore of Lake Erie where a few flakes fell. The snowfall was slightly heavier along the lake east of Cleveland to Buffalo, it was said.

While Mansfield was as cold as any city in Ohio this morning, it was much chillier in states to the north as the cold blasts from Canada spread over the northern half of the nation.

Duluth, Minn., reported a minimum of zero. It was 11 above at Minneapolis and even colder in cities across the Dakotas and Montana.

Mansfield's reading stood at 28 at noon today. A bright sun helped to warm things a bit and the absence of a strong wind which made things uncomfortable yesterday helped to keep some of the bite out of the air.

CIO LEFT WING BOOSTS POWER

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. —(U.P.)— The CIO set out today to battle employers for wage increases, congress on labor legislation, and the AFL for members with three more pro-communists on its new executive board than on the last.

One-third of the 51 new board members, scheduled to hold its initial meeting today, was identified by CIO sources as members of the extreme left bloc. Two others, Vice Presidents R. J. Thomas and Joseph Curran, are listed as "playing with the left" although both are avowed anti-Communists.

Increased strength on the executive board was won by the left wingers despite convention action denouncing Communist party interference in CIO affairs, adoption of a new preamble opposing those who would use power to exploit the people and the promulgation of new rules to curb Communist influence in the 286 CIO industrial union councils.

CIO right-wingers claimed the re-election of Thomas and the forced withdrawal of O. A. Knight, president of the oil workers, from the race for one of the vice presidencies were the only victories of the left-wingers in the five-day convention.

The pro-Communist group of CIO leaders were embittered by the CIO public denouncement of the Communist party and denial of re-election of President Reid Robinson of the smelter workers as a CIO vice president. They were reported to have exerted considerable pressure on the United Steelworkers to switch from Knight to Thomas and to have neutralized the UAW to prevent opposition to Thomas.

Judge Rules Woman Has Too Many Pets

CHICAGO — (INS) — Miss Elsie Carman faced a difficult and heartrending task today—picking one of her 11 dogs and one of her five cats, which two she may keep. But she had until Jan. 8 to do it.

Judge Samuel Heller ordered her to cut down to one dog and a cat after hearing complaints of neighbors that they couldn't sleep because of the frequent barking and yowling.

BATAAN HERO—Sgt. Nelson B. Hale, jr., of Mansfield, who survived the Bataan death march and three and a half years' imprisonment at the hands of the Japs, is staying in the army! With 10 years of service to his credit, Sgt. Hale is planning to stay in the remaining 20 for his retirement. The ex-prisoner who recently reported to Fort Ben Harrison, Indiana, for assignment to one of the guard companies, is shown above with Brig. Gen. Clifford Bluemel, right, commanding general of the fort, who was commander of the 31st division of the Philippine army. Both he and Hale were Jap prisoners. Unsuccessful at three attempts to escape from the Japs after he was captured in April, 1942, on Bataan, Sgt. Hale was liberated by American forces when Japan was taken over in August, 1945. Sgt. Hale is the son of Mrs. Leah Hale, 81 Ashland road.—(U. S. Signal Corps photo)

Survived Death March, Re-Enlists In the Army

Sgt. Nelson B. Hale, jr., Mansfield hero of Bataan, didn't let the hardships of a Jap prison camp and his brush with death in the Philippines frighten him away from the army.

He likes army life and he's back in it again—with one of the officers he knew back in those dark days in the Philippines.

Sgt. Hale, who escaped and was recaptured three times during his three and a half years of internment by the Japs, has just been assigned to a guard company at Ft. Ben Harrison, Ind.

Arriving at Ft. Harrison to become a member of the Fourth Guard company of the U. S. Disciplinary Barracks, Sgt. Hale found that the commanding general of the post, Brig. Gen. Clifford Bruemel, was the same commanding officer he had known on Bataan when he served with the 31st Division of the Philippine army.

The general and the sergeant had a long talk about their experiences as war prisoners. Gen. Bluemel was not as surprised over Sgt. Hale's story of escape as he was over the fact that the sergeant was still alive and apparently in good health.

Following his release from a Jap prison camp, Sgt. Hale volunteered to stay in Japan to aid the War Crimes commission.

Partial Eclipse of Sun Reaches Peak at Noon

Evening shadows lengthened on Mansfield's streets at high noon today as the moon blacked out approximately 46 per cent of the sun.

The partial eclipse, the last this year and the only one visible in the United States, brought out Mansfielders with smoked glasses as clear skies afforded excellent visibility. The sight was spoiled for scientists and amateur observers in many parts of the U. S. and Canada, however, by overcast or partly cloudy skies.

The celestial show began at 10:42 a. m. when the moon began its trip across the sun's path. At approximately 12:09 p. m. the eclipse reached its peak and the show closed around 1:30 p. m.

In New England the moon took a lunchtime bite of more than 50 per cent off the top of the sun. However in Maine, best spot on the nation to see the show, skies were overcast. Portland had its first snow flurries of the year, and at Augusta, where a 64 per cent eclipse otherwise would have been visible, the skies were mostly clouded.

The last partial eclipse of the sun visible in central Ohio occurred on June 9, 1945.

TRIO ESCAPES OSR; 1 STEALS PANTS, SHIRT

Fugitive Forces Third Street Women to Give Up Mate's Clothing.

An intensive search was in progress today for three inmates from the Mansfield reformatory, who escaped from the institution's farm about 4:15 p. m. yesterday.

Police today reported one of the escapers entered an East Third street home last night, forcing a housewife to give him her husband's clothing in exchange for prison garb.

Mrs. George May, 61½ East Third street, told police that one of the escapers forced his way into the family apartment about 10:30 p. m. yesterday.

He demanded food and money, she said, and when she refused, he took her husband's brown trousers and blue shirt. He discarded the reformatory jacket which he was wearing and fled.

Police have not identified the escaper who entered the Mays' apartment.

Supt. Arthur L. Glattke listed the missing men as:

Edward Koloze, received Dec. 23, 1943, from Cuyahoga county, on a one to seven year sentence for grand larceny.

Alfred Creager, received March 28, 1944, from Montgomery county, on a one to 20 year sentence for auto theft.

Benny Newlan, received April 19, 1946, from Fayette county, on a one to 20 year term for forgery.

OSR FUGITIVES HELD TO JURY

The four Mansfield reformatory honor camp fugitives who left a trail of terror through central Ohio this week were held to the Fairfield county grand jury at Lancaster today on armed robbery charges.

The four youths who, with a 17-year-old girl companion, were captured at Millersburg Wednesday night, pleaded innocent to the charges, filed by Police Chief Sam H. Hutsler.

They entered similar pleas to charges of auto larceny. Mayor Fred Von Stein of Lancaster set their bond on the latter charges at $5,000 each.

The Associated Press reported the scheduled arraignment of Sue Ellen Smith, 17, of Cleveland, who accompanied the youths during their wild rides in stolen automobiles, was postponed pending a decision on whether she should be turned over to the juvenile court.

The men, who escaped from the Grafton honor camp Tuesday, were James L. Vendor, 16, and Donald W. Burson, 22, both of Canton; Leland B. Earlenbaugh, 26, of Akron, and Robert Miller, 19, of Cleveland.

The youths were accused of threatening Joseph Stanko, 35, of Lancaster, with a shotgun and robbing him of $200 at his dry cleaning shop.

William J. Bell, 704 Park avenue east, and Merle Leedy, of Bellville, said they were forced to accompany the quintet to Columbus early Wednesday and were trussed and left in a field near Columbus.

The youths took Leedy's automobile, which they abandoned in Lancaster Wednesday night before they allegedly robbed Stanko and stole his automobile.

Plane Victims Survive 4-Day Alpine Ordeal

Hardy Mountaineers Prepare to Take 11 Marooned Americans Down From 8,000-Foot High Glacial Bowl Where Transport Wrecked.

MEIRINGEN, Switzerland — (AP) — The vanguard of a mountaineer rescue squad ploughed through treacherous snowdrifts and reached the U. S. Army's wrecked C-53 in the Swiss Alps today. They immediately began preparations to bring the 11 marooned Americans down from the 8,000-foot glacial bowl.

Brig. Gen. Ralph Snavely, directing rescue operations for the U. S. Army, announced two Alpinists had reached the wreck scene this afternoon and that about 50 more mountain climbers were close behind.

Brig. Gen. Ralph Tate, deputy commander of U. S. Forces in Austria, said the passengers most seriously sick or injured would be the first to be brought down. He expressed hope they would reach a hut halfway down the mountainside by tonight.

"We don't know how many are injured, or how seriously, but in any event we can't expect any of them down here (in the valley) before tomorrow," Tate said.

When the injured finally are brought down into the valley, they will be placed on a special train, and "we hope they will be taken to an army hospital in Munich," Tate said.

"They have been up there more than four days now, and undoubtedly are suffering from shock and exposure."

The C-53, on a trip from Munich to Pisa, crash-landed Tuesday near the steep, 11,000-foot Strahlegg peak in the heart of the Bernese Oberland, an area laced with innumerable treacherous crevasses. The peak is 13 miles southeast of Interlaken, and just northeast of the mighty Jungfrau.

The wives of Generals Tate and Snavely and an 11-year-old girl were among the seven passengers. Tate's son, Capt. Ralph Tate, jr., piloted the C-53. Gen Tate said he talked with his son by telephone and was told all had survived the ordeal.

Fight Hidden Dangers.

Silhouetted against the snow, the rescue party looked like a huge snake as it crept slowly ahead over the snow-clad glacier. Newly fallen snow hid many crevasses and the mountaineers, roped together, ventured forward at the peril of their lives.

The lead man in the party had to work his way forward at times by crawling on his belly while his companions dug in to hold him in case the snow should give way

Caged Lions, Tigers Stage Battle Royal

PEORIA, Ill.—(AP)—A cage full of roaring, clawing, snarling wild animals—nine lions and two tigers—ignored their veteran trainer and engaged in a free-for-all five minute fight yesterday.

The beasts battled until exhausted and when trainer Dick Clemens, who had only a chair and a stick to defend himself, restored order, two of the lions were dead.

Clemens, soaking wet from what he described as the most harrowing experience in 20 years of training animals, escaped without a scratch.

"I've never seen such a fight in 20 years of animal training," said Clemens, who is about 47. "They were all in it. I was in the middle and I was scared. The young lions (four two-year-olds) on one side of me and the old ones and the tigers on the other. Then all hell broke loose.

"But they weren't after me. They were as intent on each other as if they were all after a piece of meat."

TRUMAN ACTS ON NEAR EAST

Raises Diplomatic Status of Iraq, Sends Taylor Back To Vatican.

WASHINGTON —(INS)— President Truman today strengthened U. S. diplomatic representation in the strategic Near East by raising the American mission in Iraq to embassy status, and also is sending Myron Taylor back to the Vatican.

Mr. Truman named George Wadsworth, veteran career diplomat, as ambassador to Iraq. Wadsworth has been minister to Syria and Lebanon.

The president ordered Taylor to return to Rome as his personal representative to "resume discussions on matters of importance with His Holiness Pope Pius XII and others in authority."

Reorganize Red Cross.

A White House announcement said that Taylor, who holds ambassadorial rank, also will resume efforts to reorganize the Italian Red Cross and take over his position as chairman of American relief for Italy.

The Near Eastern move is significant because Iraq has been a center of world attention due to its strategic location between Iran on one side and Turkey and the Levant states on the other.

Wadsworth began his foreign service career as a U. S. envoy to Lebanon in 1916. Later he served in France, Turkey, Bulgaria, Egypt, Iran, Rolmania, and Palestine.

Taylor's mission is to be short, not to exceed 30 days. Mr. Truman's action sets at rest, however, rumors that Taylor would not return to the Vatican following protests of some Protestant clergymen against the United States having a diplomatic representative to the Holy See.

ONCE THE HODJA made a bet that he could stand all night in the snow with no fire to keep him warm. If he lost, he would provide a feast. He did it, and kept himself awake by watching a candle in the window of a house across the street. The men who had bet with him said that he did not win, because a candle gives heat and that the candle he had been looking at had kept him warm. That night when the men came for the feast it wasn't ready. When they went into the kitchen to see what was the trouble the Hodja was cooking the dinner with one candle. That is one of the stories in ONCE THE HODJA by Alice Kelsey.

A new and good animal story for older boys is THE BURRO TAMER by Florence Hayes. Ricardo wanted to catch and tame a wild burrito. If you want a good laugh read how Rosalita's beautiful hat helped Ricardo and Panchito win.

Did you ever make rainbows? Timmy and Cissy did. They made them from the colors they saw as they went walking together. It had been Timmy's secret at first, but it was more fun after he told Cissy. When Timmy was sent away to London to learn to be a clerk he and Cissy made rainbows in their letters and it made the long years of growing up apart a little easier. Older girls especially will like THE SEA IS BLUE by Marie Lawson and will be glad when Timmy and Cissey realize that they do love each other and that Timmy is "the right man".

This is one of the hands that enabled the home team, of Miss Mervin Ray, Ralph LeNeave and M. G. Murray, plus Fred S. Streseau, of Fort Lauderdale, president of the Florida Unit of the American Contract Bridge league, to gain a three-way tie for first with Miami and Tampa in the Labor Day Inaugural in St. Petersburg, Fla.

It was pointed out that the team would have had a bad score on the deal if Miss Ray in the North had doubled the 3-Hearts, which could be set only one trick. Mr. Murray, however, pulled out two extra tricks in his No Trump game. After winning the heart J lead with the K, and with a shortage of sure entries, he decided to count East as having all four outstanding diamonds, since West's bid showed so many hearts. He led the 3 to the second trick and put in the 9, which forced the 10. The spade J went to the Q, the club Q was finessed, the diamond J finesse made possible the running of that suit, and the black aces brought his total tricks to 11

On an earlier hand, with lack of entries and locked in dummy, where there were five clubs to the A-Q, Miss Ray stole a trick by leading the A and playing the J on it, then the Q, which an expert defender ducked to avoid his K being ruffed, whereupon Miss Ray produced a small club on the trick—an the defender jumped out of his chair.

No wonder that team made a good record.

Try and Stop Me

A business man grumbled to his secretary, "This has been the darndest day! Everybody is certainly getting dumb. I've asked twenty people what time it is—and every single one of them has given me a different answer!"

Even more baffled was a banker who asked an elevator man, "Can you tell me the time?" and was answered, "Do you mean now?"

Forty miles out of Chicago on the Super-Chief, Mrs. Lapidus let out a wail. "If only we had the grand piano with us, Papa!" "On a trip like this, why do you need the grand piano?" asked Lapidus. "Because," she explained, "that is where I left the tickets."

The landlord eyed his prospective tenant coldly, "I must remind you," he said, "that I will not tolerate children, dogs, cats, or parrots and no piano playing. And no radio. Is that clear?"

"Yes, sir," said the tenant meekly. "But I think you ought to know that my fountain pen scratches a little."

Byrd Plans Study Of Pole Weather

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Rear Adm. Richard E. Byrd's forthcoming Antarctic expedition will make extensive studies of weather conditions at Little America with a newly-developed nine-ton, automatic weather station, it was learned today.

Still in the experimental stage, the unmanned weather machine reports temperature, air pressure, humidity, wind direction and velocity by radio at a monitoring station 800 to 1,000 miles from its location.

Independents Win In Plymouth Vote

CLEVELAND — (INS) — The regional national labor relations board has announced in Cleveland the results of a consent collective bargaining election held yesterday at the Fate-Root-Heath company in Plymouth.

Men of Future Will Smell (Sweet), Say Beauty Experts

CHICAGO—(U.P.)—Men will start spending as much money for cosmetics as their wives within the next five years, three men experts on male grooming predicted today.

W. B. Woodard, Chicago, William Watt, New York, and Ralph J. Kachelhoffer, Freeport, Ill., all representatives of large cosmetics firms, said men are on their way toward buying great quantities of face powder, bath powder and cologne.

They'll probably buy a lot of powder puffs, too, the experts predicted at the annual "spot and spring market" of the Illinois Men's Apparel club.

More than $50,000,000 in "beauty preparations" were sold to men last year and the 1946 purchases will be even greater, the cosmeticians said.

"Men who used to steal their wives' face powder after shaving, and souse themselves with rose-scented cologne are coming right out in the open now and buying cosmetics made just for men," Woodard said.

He said men could thank—or blame—servicemen for much of the new interest in sweet scents.

"When they were overseas where they couldn't keep clean, they tried at least to smell nice," Woodard explained. "It was inevitable that other men would recognize that a fresh, clean fragrance was preferable to an aroma of tobacco, tar soap or perspiration."

Woodard said cologne was the most popular item on the male beauty shopping list. It makes up 40 per cent of the total cosmetics purchases by men, he said.

"It used to be considered effeminate for men to use colognes, but we have discovered that women like it enough to make it worth while," he added.

Although men never may buy the variety of beauty preparations purchased by women, they eventually will equal them in quantity, he said.

"This is true because men who like cosmetics use them in greater quantity," he explained. "A woman will use a drop of cologne, while her husband will dump it all over him."

Wyatt said all types of men use cologne. Their favorite scents include heather, citrus, pine, cognac, cedar, and sandalwood, and they are on sale throughout the nation in towns with 2,000 or more population, he said.

Kachelhoffer added that men in their 20's were the greatest cologne consumers.

"And for some reason no one can explain, the largest sales are in Texas and California," he said.

"I guess cowboys and movie actors have at least one thing in common—they both like to please the ladies."

18-YEAR-OLDS MUST REGISTER

Youths becoming 18 years of age must register with their selective service boards despite the current moratorium on inductions, Richland county officials of selective service warned today.

The selective service act was amended recently to exempt men under 19 years of age from induction, except as volunteers, but the requirement for every male person in the United States to register for possible military service is still in the law, it was said.

Failure to register is punishable, upon conviction, by fine or imprisonment, or both, it was pointed out.

Draft officials said that the same requirement applies to veterans who have served in the armed forces through voluntary enlistment prior to their 18th birthdays. These men have generally complied with the requirement since it is brought to their attention when they are discharged, but a few forget to do so, it was said.

ROMANIAN VOTE ANNOYS U. S.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — The United States was reliably reported today to have decided not to recognize the validity of Tuesday's elections in Roumania.

All reports from on-the-spot observers of the elections have informed the state department that there was no evidence that United States and British demands for free elections were met.

A statement setting forth the American view was anticipated shortly. It will condemn the balloting as invalid under the Yalta and Potsdam agreements of the "Big Three" whereby "free and unfettered elections" were promised the liberated lands of Europe.

The statement was not expected to go beyond a reiteration of the United States' legal position on the problem of establishing democracy in Central Europe.

More specification, such as the breaking of diplomatic relations with Romania or the withdrawal of the chief of mission there, Burton Y. Berry, has been ruled out.

Drive carefully tomorrow—and avoid taking dangerous chances just because there's no patrolman in sight.

So many attractive things are being shown in progressive Mansfield stores these days that you hardly miss the scarce items.

At any rate, during his Florida sojourn, President Truman probably refrained from sending back any of those "wish you were here" cards.

Two Manifestations of 'Human Nature'

WHILE rescue parties are working desperately to save the lives of eleven Americans whose plane crashed on an 11,000-foot peak in the Swiss Alps, the lives, safety and health of millions of other Americans are being wilfully endangered by a rebellion of 400,000 coal miners against the government of the United States.

The fact that this rebellion is under the leadership of John L. Lewis is incidental. If he were removed from the scene, someone else would take his place. The terrible conclusion must be reached that a situation has been permitted to arise in which this great country can be throttled by a small group who band themselves together in their own interests rather than considering themselves as a part of the whole co-operative plan under which a nation must function if the real purposes of democracy are to be served.

The earnest efforts to rescue those eleven victims of the plane disaster in Switzerland is typical of the humane spirit which gives thought to the well-being of others. The attitude of John L. Lewis and his coal miners is a throw-back to the days when might was substituted for right and when the law of the jungle gave no protection to those who were unable to defend themselves.

It is a strange situation that has been brought about in what is considered a "civilized" country—and millions of dazed, helpless people are anxiously awaiting its outcome as approach is made toward what should be a happy Christmas season.

Labor-Management Accord Proclaimed

AN OCCASIONAL bit of sunshine sifts through the dark clouds of labor-management dissension, revealing that in at least a few instances self-seeking agitators have been ineffective in creating the strife on which they must depend for continuance of their lucrative jobs.

Latest of the cheering reports to come through is from Waltham, Mass., where 2,400 members of the watch workers' union took a full page advertisement in their local paper to tell the world that they like their jobs and that they get along well with management.

"We are treated with respect and understanding," the advertisement said. "Our management is made up of really fine people. They are honest with us and we are really honest with them. . . . This union and its leadership is not set up to fight but to work side by side with management."

What the employes of this industry regard as "good pay and good working conditions" may be regarded as important factors in establishing and maintaining the good will evidenced in this advertisement.

Under such conditions, with mutual respect and willingness to co-operate, it seems quite likely that full production can be attained and continuance of profitable operation assured.

Just how the Waltham company avoids the interference of imported agitators and an occasional local trouble-maker is not explained, but it might be well for some other industries that are beset with recurring labor troubles to make a study of the Waltham watch company's formula—as that is the type of employe-employer relations which would tend to discourage malcontents bent on causing trouble—sometimes for no better reason than to "get even" with management for a nursed grudge.

Complex India Baffles Outsiders

HINDU-MOSLEM clashes in India apparently have been aggravated by religious pilgrimages. For generations Hindus, often as many as a million at a time, have gathered from all parts of the country for bathing in the sacred waters of the Ganges river. This year, as the procession moved into the Delhi area on foot, by bullock cart, on camels and donkeys, tension between them and the Moslems was greater than ever, a reflection of national issues concerning British-Indian freedom negotiations.

Such encounters emphasize the age-long complexities existing in the great country, India. Here is religious fanaticism coupled with social irreconcilability reaching into the heart and fiber of the entire populace. For that reason the glib opinions so often expressed in this country about the Indian freedom issue are lacking in background information and are therefore of little value.

TOUGH SPOT FOR THE CONSUMER

Tax Cut and Debt Reduction Not Assured By GOP Economy Plans

By RAYMOND MOLEY

IN A PREVIOUS column, it was pointed out that next year's federal budget cannot be based on the assumption that revenues will be as great as they were this year. But Republican leaders, apparently assuming that the same income is possible, are rushing ahead with improvised promises of economies and tax cuts. It will be well to examine these anticipated economies with care.

Last January, the president's budget message hinted that a normal peacetime budget for the years after present emergencies would be around $25,000,000,000.

He did not specify, but probably had in mind a rough guess similar to the following: Military forces, $6-8 billion; debt service, $5 billion; veterans, $3.5 billion; general administration, $4 billion; social security, farm price support, public works, international finance and other categories, $4.5 to $6.5 billion.

But circumstances since January have pushed some of these rather modest figures into the background. Most Republicans seem to be content with cuts which would leave the budget as high as our well beyond $30,000,000,000. And even the cuts they specify seem speculative.

The most popular of Republican suggestions is to cut the number of federal employes by a million.

This observer believes that Democrats have been pulling Republican legs on this item, perhaps to prepare the way for an outcry later on that the Republicans have crippled national services.

Certainly, the scare that has gone through the government has already paralyzed many useful employes.

The proof that the figure of a million was pulled out of a hat—and probably a Democratic hat—is provided by Mr. Taber, prospective chairman of appropriations. He was asked by a reporter how government employment could be reduced to 500,000 in light of the number of essential post office employes. Mr. Taber said that 200,000 were employed in the postal service. A post office department official subsequently stated that the number of post office employes is 492,364.

Somebody is doing some very loose figuring. And, what is worse, some loose talking.

The estimate of an official in Washington was that if we should drop all Federal employes except army, navy, post office, social security and treasury, we would save less than $2,000,000,000.

Truman budget estimates of August indicate a charge of $1,683,000,000 for civil service and agency salaries. Mr. Taber figures, however, that $3,000,000,000 can be saved by firing federal employes.

Everybody believes that we should cut federal employment to the bone. There are and have been vast hordes of bureaucrats eating out our substance and they should be dropped.

But they don't eat as much as Republican leaders think they do. It is doubtful if, after a year, a saving of $750,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 can be made by cutting federal employment.

In a subsequent column, a number of other economy claims will be considered.

DAILY BIBLE THOUGHT

He that uttereth truth, showeth forth righteousness.—Prov. 12:17.

Marquis Childs

Atomic Energy Control Causes Tension.

WASHINGTON—The other day the London Daily Express printed the report that Great Britain had asked the United States for atomic bombs. It was the first time this had come from a British source.

Behind this fact is an extraordinary story, which is told here for the first time. It is told because it reveals something of the tensions surrounding the issue of atomic control.

So vast is the power and so shattering are its implications that the slightest word about it is registered, just as a distant earth tremor is picked up on the sensitive instruments of the seismologists.

When the rumor was first printed that the U. S. had given atomic bombs to England, it caused a profound shock within the American atomic-energy delegation to the United Nations in New York.

Bernard M. Baruch, head of the delegation, had given his solemn pledge to all the delegates that each nation would be treated exactly alike and none shown special favors.

Baruch's first step was to get in touch with the highest authority in Washington. He was satisfied, after talking with President Truman and Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson, that there was no truth whatsoever in the report.

His next step was to go at once to Andrei A. Gromyko, head of the Russian atomic-energy delegation. Baruch asked Gromyko to leave a meeting so that he could give him his solemn assurance that the rumor was false.

At first, Gromyko was skeptical. It was apparent that the Russian suspicions, always on the alert, had been stirred by the false report. But between Gromyko and Baruch—so dissimilar in point of view, in background, in every respect—a friendly relation has grown up. Gromyko was finally inclined to accept the assurances of his friend and co-worker.

It is no secret, as the Daily Express has now confirmed, that Britain sought to obtain a stockpile of bombs. British representatives argued that they were entitled to special treatment because of the contribution that the empire made to the creation of the bomb.

Canada is the chief source of Uranium. India is the principal source of Thorium, another fissionable material. British scientists worked actively and intensively alongside American scientists in the various phases of the process that led up to the revolution over Hiroshima.

But the U. S. said No to Britain's request for bombs, insisting that all nations should be treated with complete impartiality. The answer was also No to a request for technological information which is still an American secret.

While it may have been no more than a coincidence, not long afterward the supply of thorium to this country from India was shut off. Thorium comes from the state of Travancore in southern India. The shipments were shut off on the order of the maharajah of Travancore, Sir Bala Rama Varma.

The British have said that, since the maharajah is an independent ruler, they cannot order him to resume the thorium shipments.

What the maharajah says, in effect, is that his own country should be allowed to build plants for refining the thorium and even for creating atomic energy from it.

Everywhere in the world the realization is slowly dawning that here is a force which eventually can transform the earth.

Therefore, it is more plain than ever before that no one nation can keep a monopoly on the knowledge and the process of atomic fission.

Dave Boone Says:

A FELLER up north with an empty coal bin gets a little nettled by those pictures of President Truman, sometimes in white slacks and sometimes in lavender pajamas, smiling and looking so carefree in Florida.

* * *

But I've a hunch it's all part of the coal-strike scenario so it will look all the more dramatic if he busts up his vacation and flies back to give battle to John L.

It would have been better, however, to have had Lewis pictured in Florida in lavender pajamas. That might have ended the strike. In fact, it might have ended Lewis.

* * *

When a man is naturally as good natured as Harry Truman nobody should complain about his grinning, maybe. But it would be better if, in a crisis, he would get somebody who can look sore and troubled to act as a "double" or "stand-in" for him when the picture men appear.

ODD FACT.

In St. Louis, an attendant in a hospital was discovered emptying, cleaning and refilling all the inkwells daily.

Soft Coal Production Suspended, Lewis Ignores Government Order

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

AMERICA'S economy is just beginning to round the reconversion corner.

The Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics reports that in the first full year since V-J Day more than two and one-half million workers were added to industrial payrolls. The largest single increase was in the automobile industry (a bottleneck last winter when it was tied up by strikes) which added 309,000 workers. Passenger car output for October reached a new postwar peak of 285,562, better than the monthly rate for the prewar years of 1938 and 1939.

The nation's highly geared industrial economy can be snarled, however, by walkouts in key industries. If steel is the nation's basic heavy industry, coal is its cornerstone. Soft coal provides 95 percent of all locomotive power in the U. S., 55 per cent of industrial energy, 62 per cent of electric power.

A 37-day Supply.

The current court duel between John L. Lewis and the government over bituminous mine contracts finds the nation with an overall 37-day soft coal supply, enough to last until winter comes. But individual industries are being hit almost immediately.

George T. Christopher, president of Packard Motor company, said the strike would force almost immediate shutdown of the automobile industry.

Some rail lines have as little as a 10-day fuel supply, the average is less than 30 days.

Steel centers in Pennsylvania, Illinois and West Virginia will start to shut down next week unless the dispute is settled.

At Home

Troublesome Atoms.

The men who know it best think the atom holds the future of civilization—for good or evil. These men, who devised the atom bomb, have organized a tax-free corporation to save the world from their creation. Their first task: to raise $1,000,000.

The Emergency Committee of Atomic Scientists is headed by Albert Einstein, at whose suggestion President Roosevelt started the wartime research gamble that evolved the bomb.

"Our efforts," said Dr. Einstein, "have their origin in the feeling of heavy responsibility which physicists have taken on themselves by creation of the atom bomb. Our aim is educational—not political."

The committee will not be an operating organization but it will accept full responsibility for the use to which its funds are put.

"Living Memorials."

The fashion in war memorials has changed.

The Spirit of 1776 depicts embattled colonials afoot; the Civil war placed bronze generals on bronze horses; World War I enshrined rusting tanks and obsolete pieces of ordnance. World War II monuments should be something different if wishes of the community are followed.

A poll of 500 U. S. and Canadian towns and cities by the Russell Sage Foundation indicates a strong trend for "living memorials"—something the community can use.

The report quotes a letter from an American soldier overseas who wrote that any man in service would rather see his name inscribed over one small swing in a playground than on all the marble-columned temples in the world."

Basis for Peace.

In Washington, the Catholic bishops of the United States asserted that in war's aftermath Soviet totalitarianism had replaced Nazi and Fascist totalitarianism.

The bishops saw the individual, particularly in Europe, as a waif exposed to the ideological storm between Soviet Russia and the west.

"Before we can hope for a good peace," stated the Catholic hierarchy of the U. S., "there must come an agreement among the peacemakers on the basic question of man, as man."

The prelates added that some sacrifices of national advantage should be made but that on issues bearing on the "question of man, as man," in the clash between Russia and the west, no compromise should be made.

Planes of Tomorrow.

Imaginative flights have been common among aircraft planners. A sobering pinch of salt was applied to the tall tales of aerial prophets at the National Aircraft Show in Cleveland.

Jet propulsion in the commercial field is at least five, maybe 10 years away, declared Leonard S. Hobbs, engineering vice president of the United Aircraft Corp.

"American military pilots found that flying through rough air at 500 miles an hour beats up the inside of the stomach," said Hobs. "I doubt that passengers can or will take that kind of punishment."

The industry must first find out, he said, how to transport passengers safely and comfortably at 350 and 400 mile-an-hour speeds, which can be achieved by conventional-type transports now being built in the U. S.

Now It's "Big Five."

All the big powers in the United Nations lined up in a solid front to smash an effort by small nations to wipe out or restrict use of the veto in the all-important Security Council. The Big Four became the Big Five as China's Dr. V. K. Wellington Koo joined the Council of Foreign Ministers at the Waldorf in closed sessions to discuss means of softening use of the right of veto.

Dr. Koo, before being closeted with the Big Four, declared that any hasty attempt by small nations to revise the U. N. charter might "undermine the very foundations of the world peace organizations." Koo agreed, however, with Britain, the U. S. and France that the veto procedure should be modified voluntarily by the big powers.

Vyacheslav M. Molotov, the Soviet foreign commissar, agreed to study American, British and French compromise proposals.

Abroad

Neither East Nor West.

In the House of Commons where doughty Winston Churchill often made the historic rafters ring with his spirited defense of wartime policy, Prime Minister Clement Attlee defended his Labor government's foreign policy against charges of playing second fiddle to the United States in the tug of peace with Russia.

Britain is not "ganging up" on any nation, he said, and is not pursuing an "exclusive Anglo-American alliance."

Attlee's foreign policy was upheld by a vote of 353 to 0 but an unexpectedly large number of abstentions showed the gravity of the revolt within Labor's ranks.

Disturbed China.

All China writhed in torment as rival Nationalist and Chinese Communist forces maneuvered in what appeared to be the prelude to the long threatened, all-out civil war.

Prices soared to new records as frantic civilians rushed to buy commodities to hoard and businessmen converted liquid assets to foreign currency in expectation of grueling guerrilla campaigns. The U. S. dollar was quoted on the black market at 4,650 Chinese dollars in Nanking, at 5,000 in Shanghai. Even the Hong Kong dollar, ordinarily no prize, became a speculator's item.

Coal jumped from 350,000 to 450,000 Chinese dollars a ton ($90 U. S. at the current black market rate.)

The newly convoked national assembly met in Nanking in a hopeless atmosphere to draft a new constitution.

Quotes

Tom Clark, attorney general, disagrees with the theory that war veterans are apt to turn to crime: "It is my conviction that the American soldier, especially if he has been through combat, is least likely of all to turn to crime."

Harold E. Stassen in a telegram to John L. Lewis: "If you stop mining coal you will undermine American economy at a crucial period. Such a stoppage will play into the hands of communists who want to see the nation's economy weakened."

In Short

Farmer's Diary: "Learn From Living Books."

"I COULD have bought that 80 acres in the level bottom—and at a fair price, too—but I decided against it," the man who cultivates the hill farm told me. "The realtor had some good points . . . he said I'd have better crops with less work—top soil was deeper, water table higher, hauling could be done on the level. But after thinking it over, we chose this hilly piece."

"Why did you?"

"We liked the view from up here—and when a body expects to spend most of his life somewhere, he wants a place that's interesting. Maybe that's it! My wife and I thought these hilly fields were more interesting than the bottoms. Each rolling field is a problem to be solved.

"Strip farming and contouring aren't new, you know. They've been handed down through the ages. My three boys are always tagging along, when they're not at school. The little boy—he's eight—followed along clear to the end of the long strip I was plowing, and then he said, Dad mightn't there be a better way?' I told him, 'Yes,' and to think up a better way and we'd try it out. But it pleased me. At least he was thinking!"

"How profitable is your farm, compared with the one in the valley?"

"Profits! So you ask that, too! That's the big question in every business. What profit is it yielding, in dollars and cents, right now? Not two years or ten years in the future—but what can you get out of it now! Farm, mine, shop, it's all the same. The almighty dollar is the deciding factor in all of them.

"That reasoning is all wrong. People plan too short-sightedly. The very day a person thinks about doing something worthwhile for the ones who will come after him, seems like he takes a new lease on life—his eyes brighten as he looks into the future. It's like a new birth. And it's natural, Nature prepares food for the seedlings of another year . . . Nature even tries to reclaim the lands that men have wasted and farmed out . . . Nature looks ahead!

"They say the pioneer times are all over and done with,"—that ain't so! There are still homes to be made and farms to be reclaimed among these hills. The fields are open pages. Anyone who stops to look may read. Not all the best reading is stored away in libraries!"

"No," I agreed. "It is what living human beings have accomplished that make the libraries. Living books are best. Every neighborhood has some of them."

Everybody Loses Again.

The 75-day Hawaii sugar strike cost 25,000 workers in sugar mills and on 33 plantations $70,875,000 in wages.

Wage increases the settlement granted amount to $10,500,000 a year, but a considerable part of the sum is allocated to the costs of welfare services which are taken over by the unions from the plantations.

It will be more than 10 years before the strikers can recover from the increase their 75-day wage loss.

At this time of acute sugar shortage, production of 180000 tons of raw sugar was lost. The damage of neglected fields of sugar cane can not be repaired for years.

The balance sheet of the Hawaii strike is another to be prominently included in the records of damaging strikes.—Detroit News.

Miners Wondering 'What Comes Next?'

By KENNETH L. DIXON

MORGAN, Pa.—It's no secret that even the miners wish they knew what comes next.

But, unfortunately, they haven't the slightest idea. . . .

Throughout this Pennsylvania coal country, where every hill seems to sprout miners' shacks and every valley seems to smoke with mining towns, people on both sides of the fence are more in contempt of court than United Mine Boss John L. Lewis could possibly be.

Because they all agree that:

"The next move is up to Lewis."

Any way you slice it, that unanimous statement means that they're convinced nothing the government or the courts can do will change the soft coal situation.

Snapped an angry operator:

"It makes no difference what they do to Lewis—we'll still mine no more coal until he says so . . . and if they throw him in jail it will only make things worse."

A strong pro-Lewis union official smiled and shrugged:

"What good will it do them to get tough with Lewis? The boys won't go back in until the boss says so—and Lewis is the boss."

A well-known newspaperman frowned in mental frustration.

"I don't know what's the answer," he said. "If they toss 'Saint John' in the can, labor is going to walk out all over the country. Pittsburgh found that during the power strike. Jail one union man and they all get sore. So it's not up to the government or the courts. No matter what they do to Lewis, there'll be no more coal mined unless he says so. . . ."

So what will Lewis do? The miners themselves have no idea.

"I wish I knew," grinned 39-year-old Roy Gossett ruefully. "I'd know what to tell the boys then."

And if the youthful-looking Gossett who has spent most of his life underground can't tell you, nobody around here can. Roy is chairman of the grievance committee of the UMW local at National Mine No. 1 of the H. C. Frick Coal and Coke company. He knows Lewis personally and has been to the last ten district and international conventions.

Roy is a "snapper," subterranean equivalent of a brakeman, on the coal cars. Joe Leverato, a motorman in the same mine, nodded and shrugged agreement to Roy's words. So did Jim Greer, front end man, and Sam Miller, a middle-aged, gaunt-faced hand-loader—one of the toughest jobs in any mine. "We don't know what he'll do next," Sam said slowly, hunching his shoulders up with his elbows on the table. "We're just waiting."

"All these men believe in Lewis. They think he has led them well before and will again. Otherwise, I couldn't print their names. There were others in the crowd who thought Lewis no good—who thought they'd be better off without him.

But all of them agreed that jailing Lewis would only unite union men in walkouts all across the country, and none of them knew what Lewis would do next.

Football Gets Down to Serious Business

SPORTS ROUND UP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK — (AP) — Mingled with the wolf howls and talk of retirement echoing around football stadia these frosty November days you'll hear a few words of praise for a new generation of big-time college coaches. . . . This year marks the retirement of such respected old-timers as Dana X. Bible and Andy Kerr and you hear rumors—quickly denied—that Harvard's Dick Harlow and Alabama's Frank Thomas may give up coaching because of their health. . . . The alumni wolves are supposed to be on the trail of Charley Bachman of Michigan State, Homer Norton of Texas A. and M., Harry Stuhldreher of Wisconsin and Ox Da Grosa of Holy Cross.

Some folks even are wondering whether Minnesota's Bernie Bierman and Duke's Wallace Wade can survive the disappointing seasons they've had. . . . On the other hand, there's no complaint about such coaches as Paul Bixler, Bert La Brucherie, Jim Tatum, Art Guepe and Wes Fesler, who were coaching "unknowns" a few years ago. . . . Maybe it's a business for young men.

WRONG PEW.

The University of Idaho basketball dope book lists a game against St. Joseph's of Philadelphia to be played in Independence hall. . . . If staid Philadelphians ever hear of the vandals getting in that hall, there'll be a search party looking for a new crack in the Liberty Bell.

SHORTS AND SHELLS.

Perry Moss, high scorer of the Illinois football team, has gained just seven yards and one foot in making five touchdowns. All were on quarterback sneaks. And Bob Longacre of William and Mary has returned eight kickoffs for 327 yards, three for touchdowns. . . . Bradley S., returning to big-time basketball, starts Dec. 7 with a doubleheader against North Dakota and Omaha.

Iberia Rolls Over Edison Five, 43-18

EDISON — Iberia Presidents opened their 1946-47 Morrow county basketball league schedule by burying Edison 43 to 18 here last night.

Iberia vaulted into a 9 to 0 lead at the first intermission point and were never pushed. Forward Mann of the Prexies splashed six fielders and four gratis tosses through the hoop. Edison copped the preliminary reserve contest, 35-21.

Coach Ronald Sommerville's Iberia five plays at Johnsville next Wednesday.

Veteran Butler 5 Beats Lucas, 44-33

BUTLER — Butler high school opened defense of its Richland county basketball league title by smothering Lucas, 44-33, here last night.

Lucas copped the county tournament title last year but after the first period had little chance against Butler's lettermen studded quintet. Coach Ed Wysocki of Butler has seven monogram winners off the 1945-46 championship squad

Butler led at the intermission 5-4, 18-8 and 31-18. Lucas came back strong in the final eight minutes to out score the victors, 15-13, but it was too late. Butler also copped the reserve contest, 32-14.

FINAL COLLEGE PROGRAM RIFE WITH TRADITION

NEW YORK — (AP) — With Army definitely removed from the post-season picture, college football today gets down to the business at hand—the choosing of bowl contestants and the naming of conference champions.

And with the 1946 campaign running out across the land the program is rife with tradition, including such Ivy-festooned rivalries as the Yale-Harvard classic, down for its 63rd renewal at the stadium in Cambridge, Mass.

In the afternoon's big game, University of California at Los Angeles goes against its big intracity rival, Southern California, in the battle before more than 100,000 fans that will decide the conference champion and coast contestant in the Rose Bowl. UCLA is a seven-point favorite.

The eastern Rose Bowl nomination hinges on the outcome of two Big Nine games—Michigan vs. Ohio State at Columbus and Illinois vs. Northwestern at Evanston. An Illini triumph would clinch the New Year's day trip regardless of how second-place Michigan fares against third-place Ohio State.

Two other closing Big Nine games in the neighborhood scrap category are Indiana's invasion of Purdue and Minnesota's visit to Wisconsin.

Notre Dame, ranking just a shade below Army in the latest national ratings, goes to New Orleans for its traditional intersectional joust with Tulane.

Georgia, with UCLA the only major elevens owning perfect records, figures to make it an easy day against Chattanooga, a warmup for next week's important meeting with Georgia Tech. Tech entertains Furman.

The traditional duel between Mississippi and Mississippi State is one of the south's major clashes, along with the Tennessee-Kentucky game and the Duke-North Carolina meeting. Virginia entertains West Virginia, Clemson is at Auburn and North Carolina State visits Florida.

Rice is favored to add Texas Christian to its string of victims and thereby strengthen its bid for the Cotton Bowl. Rice must also beat Baylor next week before it gets its hunk of the southwest conference title. Arkansas, sure of at least a tie, is idle until Thursday's date with Tulsa. Baylor meanwhile faces Southern Methodist.

Partial determination of the Big Six crown hinges on the Nebraska-Oklahoma contest, with the winner sharing the championship although the co-holder won't be determined until Thursday when Kansas faces Missouri.

Boston College entertains its second strong intersectional foe in two weeks when it takes on Alabama. Other eastern contests find Holy Cross at Temple, Penn State at Pitt, Bucknell at Rutgers, Syracuse at Columbia and Georgetown at New York University.

Worsham Tops Golf Tourney

ATLANTA —(AP)— Reduced to 60 top scorers, or about one-third the original field, the $12,000 Druid Hills invitation golf tournament entered the third round today with Lou Worsham of Washington, D. C., holding a three-stroke lead.

Worsham, a 29-year-old veteran of 30 months in the navy, turned in a five-under-par 67 yesterday, his second sub-par round, over the 6,575-yard course for a 36-hole total of 136.

Joe Zarhardt of Norristown, Pa., and Jimmy Demaret of Houston, Tex., were deadlocked for second place with 130's, one stroke in front of Fred Haas, jr., of New Orleans, and amateur George Hamer of Columbus, Ga. Hamer turned in a 67 to share second round low score honors with Worsham while Zarhardt has a 68, Haas a 69 and Demaret a 72.

The church leagues must have their eligibility blanks into Fike's office before next Wednesday while the Commercial "B" loop has until Thursday to return its forms

Army Gridders Turn Thoughts To Navy Game

WEST POINT, N. Y. — (U.P.) — Army football team, its bowl dreams officially and irrevocably dissolved, returned its attention today to preparation for next Saturday's Navy game, expected to be a grand climax to one of the greatest three-year records ever compiled.

Army is a four-touchdown favorite to whip the Middies and mark up its third straight undefeated season. However, Notre Dame tied Army two weeks ago, and the Cadets' three-year record would show 27 victories and a tie in 28 games. In 1944 and 1945 Army was undisputed national champion, and is slightly favored over Notre Dame for that mythical title again this season.

The Cadets, stronger in every department than Navy, practiced this week with their attention on California and its Rose Bowl. They were eager to go, and anxiously awaited an invitation which never came. The Pacific Coast conference signed a five-year pact with the Big Nine and the Big Nine champion will play the big New Year's day game.

Yesterday Army officials announced that West Point's season would end with the Navy game.

Today the team hid its disappointment and began to concentrate on Navy, its traditional foe in perhaps the most colorful college football games in the nation.

Coach Earl Blaik, All-American Backs Glenn Davis and Doc Blanchard, and their teammates, all but two of whom graduate, were planning to make their exit a magnificent one.

Army expects to shoot the works against Navy.

Brown Victory Would Clinch Division Title

NEW YORK—The pro football spotlight will be focused on Cleveland tomorrow as the Buffalo Bisons try to delay the Browns' clinching of the western division championship of the All America conference. A large delegation of Buffalo fans will swell the Browns' attendance, now 582,250, well over the former professional record.

A victory will put the Browns out of reach of Los Angeles, San Francisco, and Chicago, all of whom have a chance for second place money. Brooklyn, Buffalo, and Miami likewise have a chance to grab second place behind New York's Eastern champions, with four weeks of play remaining.

The balanced Brown attack, in which the toe of Lou Groza is the greatest scoring threat, will be matched against Buffalo's ground game, best in the conference. Groza has a chance to break the pro field goal record, having kicked 10 in 11 games to date. He has made 61 points to lead the circuit.

Another kicking duel will be presented in Yankee stadium Sunday when Harvey Johnson of New York and Steve Nemeth of Chicago tangle. Each has made 25 straight extra points. Nemeth has made 7 field goals to Johnson's 5 straight. The two clubs tied at 21-all in September.

It will be the triple-threat talents of Glenn Dobbs, jr., of Brooklyn against the clever quarterbacking, ball-handling, passing, and kicking of Frankie Albert of San Francisco in Ebbets field also Sunday afternoon. Albert is supported by a much stronger running game than Dobbs, and the 49ers are favored.

Miami will try to make it two in a row against Los Angeles in the Orange Bowl Monday night, having dumped Buffalo, 21 to 14, last Monday.

2 BUCKS MAKE BIG NINE TEAM

By CHARLES EINSTEIN

CHICAGO — (INS) — The experts finished their task of parlaying quantity into quality today, and the result was a smart, speedy football team —International News Service's All-Western conference eleven for 1946.

Coaches, assistant coaches, officials, athletic directors, and International News Service sports savants up and down the length and breadth of Western conference football land did the picking.

They picked no less than 16 ends. They picked 13 tackles. They picked eight centers (and there are only nine teams in the loop!)

But eleven men stood above the others, and of the eleven, there were four whose nominations were invariably suffixed with "He'd make All-American on anybody's team."

This standout quartet includes John Cannady, Indiana's center and "sixth-sense" defensive control-man; Alex Agase, Illinois' unbudgeable object at guard; Warren Amling, Ohio State tackle who switched positions this year after hitting All-American at guard last year, and Bob Chappuis, Michigan halfback who's been called by notably intelligent sources "Tom Harmon the second."

At the ends were a pair of defensive genii—Cecil Souders of Ohio State and Elmer Mader of Michigan. Clarence Esser, All-Concerence at Wisconsin last year, was there again, joining Amling at tackle.

Agase's running mate at guard was a converted fullback, lowcharging Ed "Buckets" Hirsch of Northwestern.

Season-long injuries didn't hobble Indiana's All-American Pete Pihos enough to keep him out of the first-team fullback slot; and Indiana's playmaking engineer, pass-crazy Benny Raimondi, fitted in neatly at quarterback. High-scoring Vic Schwall, Northwestern's ball toting troublemaker, joined Chappuis at halfback.

National Pro Docket Lists Five Contests

NEW YORK — First place in the eastern division will be at stake tomorrow when the New York Giants and the Pittsburgh Steelers lead National Football league teams into the final fortnight of a record breaking season.

Firmly lashed to the Giant standard a week ago, the lead now comes up for re-assignment in a schedule of five games that will send National league attendance to a record high. The 35,186th ticket holder to pass through the turnstiles for tomorrow's games will lift the season's figures above the all-time total of 1,442,737 set a year ago in 50 games.

Sharing the spotlight with the Giant-Steeler affair, which also will mark Ken Strong day at the Polo Grounds, are the Washington-Eagle game at Philadelphia and Chicago Cardinals-Packer contest at Green Bay. Lingering title hopes of the Redskins, Eagles and Packers will be at stake in these two battles, hopes that cling to the precious problematical possibilities so vital to the morale of most teams in the waning weeks of a race.

Other games tomorrow find the Chicago Bears, western division leaders, engaging in the first of two games in two weeks with the Detroit Lions, and the Los Angeles Rams visiting the Yanks in Boston. The Bear-Detroit contest is scheduled in Chicago.

Pittsburgh projected itself back into the title picture last week on Bill Dudley's last minute field goal, which surprised the Eagles, 10 to 7, while Boston and Paul Governali's passing in the rain were shocking a confident Giants eleven into a 28 to 28 tie. Dudley and Pittsburgh all but overtook the Giants in Pittsburgh on Oct. 6, rallying to score 14 points after trailing 17 to 0 at the half.

Sid Luckman, who has pulled the Bears back from the brink of defeat in the last minute three times this year, dealt the Redskins' title chances a serious jolt last week with a touchdown pass to Jim Keane. But for that pass, the Redskins today would be tied with the Giants, instead of hanging on by their finger tips.

COUSIN FLITWING IS ANXIOUS

Peter Rabbit almost doubted his own eyes There, peering around the edge of a loose piece of bark on an old stump, was Cousin Flitwing the Wasp

"It is you!" cried Peter rather foolishly.

"Who else could I be?" demanded Cousin Flitwing sharply, coming wholly out from behind the loose bark, flitting her wings.

"I don't know," confessed Peter. "You surprised me, that's all. I have been wondering about you, but this is the last place in the world I expected to find you"

"Why shouldn't I be here? Do you know any good reason why I shouldn't," retorted Cousin Flitwing.

"None at all," Peter hastened to say. "There is no reason why you shouldn't be anywhere you want to be. I found your home under the big rock empty and I have been wondering what had become of you. Your home was deserted What did you leave it such a busy place all summer that it is hard to think of it as being for? And where are all those children of yours who helped you all summer?"

"Most of them are dead They couldn't stand the cool weather Anyway their work was done," replied Cousin Flitwing in the most matter of fact tone.

"All of them?" cried Peter

"I said most of them are somewhere about doing just what I am doing," replied Cousin Flitwing.

"And just what are you doing?" Peter promptly asked

"Looking for a good place to spend the winter," replied the Wasp and disappeared behind the loose bark.

In a moment she was out again, walking along the edge and carefully looking it all over. "If some of us didn't sleep over winter to start new families in the spring there wouldn't be any Wasps at all. Somebody has to stay alive to lay eggs and start new families," said she.

"You mean you are like the Bumble Bee folk, only the Queens live to another season I know about them," said Peter.

"It is the same way with us," agreed Cousin Flitwing.

"What about your cousins, Madam Dauber and Madam Baldface? Is it the same with them?" Peter wanted to know

"Just the same," said Cousin Flitwing. "Only next year's mothers live. And to do that they must find a place to sleep where they won't freeze to death That is what I am looking for now. I guess this will do"

"What will do?" asked Peter He looked puzzled, as if he didn't understand at all what Cousin Flitwing was talking about. He didn't.

"This place," replied Cousin Flitwing a bit crossly She was beginning to find Peter's questions annoying As she spoke she crawled in behind the piece of loose bark Once more she came out.

"Do you mean you are thinking of going to sleep behind that piece of bark?" cried Peter.

"Why not? Do you know of any better place?" demanded cousin Flitwing

"No No, I don't," replied Peter hastily Then he added "I suppose Madam Baldface will sleep in that big house of hers over in the dear Old Briarpatch It looks as if it might be very comfortable"

"I don't know where she will sleep, but it won't be in there, I can tell you that," said Cousin Flitwing, opening and closing her wings as if to make sure that they were in good working order

"Do you mean to say that fine big house of hers is empty?" cried Peter.

"As empty as mine, and you saw for yourself how empty that is. I never could see any sense in doing all the extra work of building walls such as her house has when it is to be used only through the summer." Once more Cousin Flitwing crept behind the bark.

RESCUERS AT SITE OF CRASH

beneath him. When the lead Alpinist reached the end of the rope, he in turn dug in to hold while the second member of the party followed with equal caution. The operation was repeated until the entire group had been pulled forward another few yards.

Gen. Snavely said the vanguard of the Alpine rescue squad reached the scene of the crash at 2:21 p. m. (8:21 a. m., EST).

(A European Air Transport Service hospital plane took off just before 8 a. m. (EST) for Interlaken, Switzerland, with medicine for the victims. The plane carried two nurses and two medical corpsmen.)

(In the United States the army prepared to fly to the scene a helicopter equipped with special rotor blades designed for use in high altitudes.)

Weather Improves.

Improved weather was helping the rescue party of about 65 members, retarded last night by rain and snow. The rescuers carried a dozen collapsible stretchers. By tonight they hoped to move the injured to a ski hut about half way down the tortuous descent to a valley.

Tate said crewmen of the stranded plane were firing rockets into the skies to guide their rescuers, who, roped together, were scaling a treacherous 30-degree slope of the Rosenlaui glacier.

The rockets were dropped over the scene yesterday by search planes after the ship was found nosed up against a mountaintop 10,000 feet high.

a survey of their dwindling coal piles.

The governor asked Chairman Harold L. Mason of the state utilities commission to report on utilities' stockpiles by Monday.

"Obviously, if the coal strike continues, we will be faced with a definite shortage of fuel," Lausche said. "Common sense dictates that conservation of fuel is necessary to carry us through the emergency."

The CPA order affects all electric and gas companies using coal. In addition to the lighting brownout, it bans electricity for non-essential refrigeration and air conditioning.

The order also curtails elevator and escalator service to 75 per cent of normal in buildings with more than one elevator.

If the coal supply dwindles to a 15-day level, elevator service and street lighting will be cut to 50 per cent of normal. If the supply drops to a 10-day level, electric street car and interurban railways will be cut to 50 per cent of normal, and elevators to 30 per cent.

Exempted from all orders are hospital, food preservation and refrigeration services, and newspapers.

BATAAN HERO STAYS IN ARMY

responsible for his long years of suffering as a prisoner.

Sgt. Hale returned to the United States last July. He wants to be a 30-year army man, which leaves only 20 years to go. "I like army life," he said.

The first time he escaped from the Japs, Sgt. Hale said he surprised the Nips by "shoving off" only four days after the fall of Bataan, when he and 14 others, out on a road cutting detail, saw their chance and took it. They managed to evade capture for seven months, living in the Philippine jungles on fruit and on more substantial food brought to them by Filipinos. Seven of the 15 died of disease.

Finally Sgt. Hale and the seven others were recaptured and sent to Fort Bilibid in Manila. The sergeant thinks that, through some lucky mixup, the Jap officers at the new prison did not realize that they were escapers—at any rate they were not punished.

Nearly Starved.

The second time he was not so lucky. He and four buddies managed to make their get-away from another camp where "we were being slowly starved to death." After 90 days they were "turned in" by a Filipino who succumbed to the Jap offer of nine sacks of rice for giving information about escaped prisoners. "The Filipinos were pretty hard up for food in those parts, too," said the sergeant. This was in the fall of 1944

"Back at the camp," he said, "the Nips spread new gravel in front of the guard house. Our hands were tied behind us, bamboo rods were tied under our knees and we were forced to kneel on the gravel all day, every day for 15 days. During this time we received one rice ball and one cup of water apiece at noon each day. That was all. If we had a "soft-hearted" guard, we would be untied and allowed to lie down on the gravel at night." At the end of the 15 days, Hale related, they were unable to stand or walk.

"As soon as were released," he said, "we were ordered out to cut grass. We had to crawl to work on our hands and knees, and cut grass from the same position," he said.

Still not "cured," Sgt. Hale, with 14 other men and two officers, escaped for the third time, about a month later, from a work detail at Clark field. At that time both the Japs and their prisoners had been hearing of American victories Sgt Hale isn't sure whether that had anything to do with the treatment accorded them upon recapture, but anyway the Jap officer gave them each two packs of cigarets and told them to "get back to work." Two days later, he and 1000 others were shipped to Japan. Here Sgt. Hale was lucky again. Most of the convoy ships were sunk during the 22-day journey, but the sergeant's ship got through unscratched. "Sixty died on the way," he said. "There were 1032 of us in the ship's hold."

Cubs Exhibit Hobby Displays

Hobby displays were exhibited at the meeting of Cub Pack 6 of South Boulevards, when 35 members met last night. Each member gave a short talk describing his display.

Two cubs from Louisville, Ky., Bob and Dick Sundell were admitted into the pack. Advancement awards were given to David Wittmer, who received the wolf badge and dinner stripe; John Mastrek, silver arrow and dinner stripe and Lowell Hamilton, buckskin stripe. Plans will be made for a Christmas party at the next meeting.

JOHN FOOLS CLOCK

VENTURA, Calif. — (AP) — Customers who drop into John Morrissey's barber shop find it easy to tell time from a clock which runs backwards. When Morrissey had his electric clock changed from 50 to 60 cycles, it ran backward. So he changed the numerals to counter-clockwise order and now customers tell the time by looking in the mirror.

Lippmann Today and Tomorrow

IF ANYTHING useful is to come of the talk about armaments—be it the size of the Red Army and of the British and American forces at home and abroad, our strategic bases, the atomic bomb—we shall have, I believe, to recognize two propositions which all governments regard as self-evident and no government will discuss publicly.

The first is that two governments, however closely allied, will not voluntarily tell each other all their military secrets. The second is that all governments, however friendly, are continually at work cracking each other's secrets.

As long as these two propositions are not admitted, a public debate on disarmament can never be sincere. Moreover, public proposals to disarm or to regulate armaments will be maneuvers for national advantage in the balance of power.

I hasten to say that my purpose in making these statements is not to promote cynicism but on the contrary to find a firm basis of truth on which practical progress might be made in the world as it is today. But first the statements themselves must be substantiated.

THE FIRST PROPOSITION is that two governments, however closely allied, will not voluntarily tell each other all their military secrets. No two governments in all history were ever more closely allied than the British and American during this war. They pooled almost all their military secrets. But not all. The United States, for example, withheld some of the secrets of the atomic bomb; Britain, for example, withheld some of the secrets of her own secret agents in various parts of the world.

It goes without saying that even in the crisis of the war there was no such thing as full disclosure of military plans, intelligence, or weapons by the Soviet Union and the British-American staffs.

Now that the common danger is over, and rivalry is so intense, we cannot count on greater frankness.

The second proposition is that all governments, knowing that all other governments withhold secrets, are continually at work cracking these secrets. How far they succeed is, of course, itself a top secret, and I am not meaning to give the impression that I know any of these top secrets. But two concrete examples can be cited to prove the point which matters, namely that governments know more about each other's military affairs than the ordinary citizen would suppose if he just listened to the public speeches.

NOT LONG AGO Mr. Churchill made a statement about the size of the Red Army in eastern Europe, and this drew from Stalin a statement saying that there were 60 divisions. The figures he published may have been news to the general public; they were known with negligible differences to those whose business it was to know them.

Another example. M. Molotov is prodding the British to say publicly how many troops they have stationed in friendly countries. He means particularly the Middle East. But M. Molotov knows how many troops the British have. We know. The native governments in the Middle East know. What, then, is the dark secret that M. Molotov is trying to extract from Sir Alexander Cadogan? It is that the British are stronger in certain places than the excitable elements of the native population have been told, and weaker in others than the maintenance of order might require. What M. Molotov is seeking is not information affecting the security of the Soviet Union or of the world but the publication of information which could embarrass the British in the unsettled Middle East.

IF WE RE-EXAMINE the problem of armaments in the light of these two propositions, we may be able to draw some useful practical conclusions.

One is that not much is to be gained by basing an international armaments policy on "inspection." No government will agree to complete inspection of its military secrets, and incomplete inspection will disclose only the information that does not really matter. Short of inspectors who sit in the inner councils of the highest military authorities in all countries, the critical military information cannot be inspected.

The basic conclusion of the Acheson-Lilienthal committee, and the major premise of their proposals, was that military secrets cannot be "inspected" from the outside.

An international agreement to permit inspection of all military affairs is an absolute impossibility. The inspectors would have to have free access to the deliberations of the Politburo, of our joint chiefs of staff, and the key to all the codes and the combinations of all the safes.

Since every government knows that total inspection is impossible, no government will rely upon the reports of the inspectors that the diplomats might agree to appoint. The stakes are the life and death of nations, and no government will trust to inspectors to tell it whether it is in danger of attack. Inspection, however impressive, will inevitably be supplemented by secret intelligence. The Russians would certainly be sure secretly to inspect for themselves the inspectors and what the inspectors reported and did not report. We would be more naive than we are if we didn't do this too.

THEREFORE, in discussing armaments with the Russians we ought to talk privately, and only at the highest level, and only when we are in sight of a general political settlement in Europe, the Middle East and the Far East. Until then no one is going to disarm anyway, and we ought not to disarm. When and if such talks can be arranged, we should not start with the naive assumption that we do not all know the essential facts about our respective military positions. We should not talk unless we do know them before we talk.

The object of the talks should not be to find out what we don't know but to reach agreements on how the power, which we all know about, is to be brought into balance and kept in balance—how, to take the crucial issue as an example, a reliable balance is to be struck between the inexhaustible numbers of the Russian infantry which can march anywhere into Europe and Asia, and our technological superiority which enables us to strike with devastating effect from great distances at almost any place in the world. Inspection has little bearing on this—the real problem of armaments, which is to make a settlement by striking a balance between the total power of the Soviet Union and the total power of the western world.

YMCA OVER TOP IN ITS DRIVE FOR MEMBERS

450 Quota Exceeded, Campaign Extended to Next Week.

The Mansfield YMCA annual membership drive has already exceeded its goal of 450 members and industrial reports are still coming in, Richland Tucker, general campaign chairman, announced today.

"When reports are complete we expect to exceed last year's total of 538 members," Tucker said.

Partial reports from the current drive were made at a meeting of workers at the "Y" last night. Because complete reports from the industrial divisions were not available, it was decided to extend the drive through next week.

Chairmen of the industrial divisions are Franklyn Lay and Vernon Smeltzer, large industries, and Charles Green and Robert Ross, small concerns.

Reports checked last night showed that the school division, headed by Harold Mansfield, had turned in 100 memberships, the largest number from any group. Next in line was the uptown division with a total of 88 members. This group is chairmaned by Robert J. Horn and Myron Miller.

Among the more than 450 memberships reported were 166 new boys' and 31 new adult memberships; 167 boy renewals and 88 adult renewals.

"When all reports are in, we hope to have a complete roster of around 1,000 members," Tucker said today.

2 SHELBY MEN HURT AS AUTO OVERTURNS

SHELBY—Two Shelby men, Emmet Hicks, 31, and Francis Armbruster, 26, sustained injuries this morning at 8:10 a. m. when the car in which they were riding on route 96 east of Shelby overturned after running off the road and striking a pole.

They were taken to the Shelby Memorial hospital where attaches at noon today said that Armbruster had sustained a brain concussion and had not regained consciousness, while Hicks' right leg had been fractured. Armbruster's condition was reported as "serious."

NEW CHEERLEADERS

Senior Cast Shows Ability In 'Spring Dance' Performance

By MARGUERITE MILLER

Undaunted by the coldest weather of the season, more than 800 parents, friends and veteran play-goers nearly filled Senior high school auditorium last night for the Senior class presentation of Phillip Barry's light and wholesome "Spring Dance."

Handling the play expertly, the 13 seniors in the cast presented the comedy-romance of college life as if it had been written expressly for them.

Well cast and directed by Earl L. Heasley, Senior high dramatics coach, each of the players stood out in his own part. There was no scene-stealing.

John Bishop and Anne Parsons in the leading roles of Sam Thatcher and Alex Benson showed they were familiar with theatricals as they kept the play moving by their adult understanding of their roles.

Bishop, well known to Mansfield audiences through his early work with the Childrens' Theater, was recently chosen one of eight best humorous readers in the state, and Miss Parsons' clear voice and interpretation has won her much praise. Both are members of the advanced speech class at Senior high. All members of the cast have had speech training.

Adding essential touches to the typical college setting were Jean Daugherty in the role of Miss Ritchie, straight-laced house mother, and James Londot as the scientific-minded Biology professor. Both showed a flair for comedy and characterization analysis.

Frankie Lane, veteran of Junior Workshop presentations, couldn't have been better cast than she was in the role of the unpredictable, witty Sally Prescott. Patricia O'Hara, a newcomer, turned in an admirable performance as the scatterbrained and lovable Mady Platt.

Others in the cast, all of whom showed understanding of their roles as well as graceful interpretation included Doris Alverson as Mildred, the house maid; James Garrison, as John Hatton, Yale man; Robert Frere as the womanhating Lippincot; John Brandt as Doc Boyd and William Hallabrin as Buck Buchanan, both of Princeton; Dorothy Speck as the appealing Frances Fenn and Mary Ann Maple as the studious Kate McKim.

Prompter for the show was Virginia McMichael. Appearing for between act numbers was the Senior high school orchestra under the direction of J. Merton Holcombe.

Six former members of senior play casts of the past 10 years stood in the audience as the titles of their plays were called out. It was an expression of recognition for the work of players.

Suffers Burns When Gas Ignites

Raymond Sayer, 14½ West Chestnut street, received minor burns last night when a pan of gasoline was ignited by a spark from a acetylene torch at the William Bottomley garage, 131 Snyder street. Only minor damage resulted from the fire.

The fire department answered two other calls yesterday, but no serious loss was reported. Engines were called to the Balyeat Bedding company, 481 North Main street, to extinguish a minor fire at noon.

Firemen were called to North Main Street road about midnight to extinguish a motor fire in a 1932 model automobile. The motor was set afire when anti-freeze solution boiled over.

SIX CUB SCOUTS RECEIVE AWARDS

Six members of Cub Pack 6 were presented with advancement awards at the monthly meeting of the pack last night at the YMCA.

Lowell Bricker, cubmaster, presented awards to David Wittmer, John Masek, Bill Bromfield, Byron Hamilton, Dick Campbell and Henry Allers.

A talk on each of their hobbies was made by cubs who last night brought hobby samples.

Door-Breaker's Fine Suspended

Robert Felton, 65 South Franklin avenue, was fined $25 and costs in municipal court today for malicious destruction of property at a North Main street cafe.

The court suspended the fine on the condition that Felton pays for a door glass which he broke. Felton pleaded innocent.

INMATE SEEKS OSR RELEASE

Charging he was transported unlawfully and against his will from Chicago to the Ohio State reformatory here, Hugh Philson Thomas, OSR inmate, today asked the common pleas court to free him under a writ of habeas corpus.

Thomas claims he has been held at OSR from Dec. 22, 1943, to March 15, 1946, and from Nov. 7, 1946, to the present "unlawfully and unconstitutionally" because he was not extradited, nor did he waive extradition, at the time of his removal from Chicago in 1943.

The prisoner, in his petition, charges that a "Mr. Rooney, parole officer" told him he didn't need extradition papers and also told him "he'd better put his hands together to be handcuffed or he might be hurt."

Thomas also claims the action was not only in violation of the due-process-of-law clause in the constitution but was also in violation of the extradition laws of the states.

OSR records showed that Thomas, now 32 years old, was received at the reformatory in August, 1934, from Summit county where he was sentenced to a one-to-20-year term on a charge of operating a motor vehicle without the owner's consent.

He was paroled in October, 1935, and was declared a parole violator Dec. 22, 1943, when he was returned to the reformatory from Chicago. Paroled again on March 15, 1946, he was returned as a parole violator on Nov. 7, 1946.

Death Takes Fred Lamp, 84

Group Backs New Library System

COLUMBUS—(AP)—A reorganization of the present library system, largely on a county basis; a state-aid financial program providing possibly $500,000 a year; and establishment of standards for librarians will be suggested to the new general assembly in January by the Ohio Library Survey commission.

The commission agreed yesterday to submit the three bills to the legislature, and adjourned until Dec. 6 and 7. The state now contributes $50,000 a year to libraries. Under the proposed bills, up to $500,000 in state aid would be sought for distribution under a plan similar to the state aid program for public schools.

MORE FOX MONEY?

Maybe Richland county's fox hunters will continue to reap bounties from the county treasury after all. With only enough money left in the fox bounty fund to pay for 26 more animals, C. L. Shoup, chairman of the board of county commissioners, today said he would ask the board to consider a supplemental appropriation Monday morning. The fox bounty fund was dealt a heavy blow yesterday when Robert Derror, Mansfield, R. D. 3, turned in the paws of seven foxes. He collected $21, which leaves only $78 in the fund.

LESSON TO OTHERS—

One Mansfielder is considering himself lucky to be around these days and the incident that nearly cost him his life should prove a lesson to other hunters.

According to the story, he came close to becoming a Richland county hunting fatality. Overanxious at getting a fast drop on any game that might suddenly break cover, he violated one of the cardinal rules of safety in the field by carrying his gun cocked. During the day it was accidentally discharged past his face, with the blast tearing away the peak of his hunting cap.
